

Mini-Conference #4
Building Authentic Community Connections
Wednesday, February 23, 2022 | 9am-11am
FREE

How do we define and discuss trauma-informed systems? In this mini-conference, we will explore how making authentic community connections is foundational to building an equitable, trauma-informed, and community-led approach. This conference will include a discussion on core components of community organizing, mobilizing, and advocacy as strategies that shift power and center equity in trauma-informed communities. In a continued effort to practice skills and prioritize wellness, we will lead with the importance of relationships by making connections across networks during our time together.

Learning Objectives

By the end of the virtual mini-conference, participants will be able to:

- Define equitable, trauma-informed, and community-led approaches through key principles of trauma-informed communities
- Understand the difference between community organizing, mobilizing, and advocacy
- Practice wellness and relational connections
